Global equity markets began the third quarter on a positive note but posted weaker performance towards the end of the quarter, with performance largely unchanged for the quarter as a whole. Japan posted the most strength and rose slightly, while the European market posted the weakest performance. The Nordic stock market index also fell. Long-term market rates rose worldwide during the period as concerns grew for a persistent inflation. The market believes that the central banks are approaching the end to the cycle of rate hikes, although there may be one or several additional hikes. The fund is composed to create a well-diversified, comprehensive solution to create value over time through financial returns, while easing the burden on the planet through sustainable investments. We are retaining a balance between growth-oriented and more defensive themes in the Kapitalförvaltning funds to maintain an appropriate risk level in the equity portion of the portfolio. Based on our market outlook, we increased the portion of Swedish equities in the portfolios as we believe the Swedish equity market has the potential to recover the gap between global equities that arose when the risk appetite returned to the market. The fund has an equity weighting of 53%.
