Portfolio manager comments — Q2 2024

Despite a number of challenges, fund performance was positive in Q2. Focus has been on the global inflation rate and the measures taken by the central banks. The US inflation has been more persistent than expected and has led the market to adjust its expectations for rate cuts from the US central bank, the Fed. Instead of the cuts that were expected at the beginning of the year, the market is now questioning whether there will be any cuts during the year. This has led to rising interest rates and slightly weaker stock markets, while geopolitical risks are expected to remain significant going forward. Despite these challenges, the risk sentiment in the credit market has been positive. Issuing activity with the High Yield market was high, particularly for green and sustainable issues.

The fund has held a relatively neutral duration but has chosen to increase this slightly during the summer due to geopolitical risks and inflation outlooks. The credit risk in the fund has also risen with investments in new companies within renewable energy (Sunnova Energy Corporation) and real estate (CPI Property Group SA), where the pricing is considered to be attractive. These investments, together with the Danish energy company European Energy AS, were the strongest contributors to the fund's positive performance. The Norwegian company BEWI ASA, which has a significant exposure to the new construction of real estate.
