We are facing an exciting autumn, with factors such as the US election, geopolitical unrest, and expectations for sharp cuts to interest rates from the central banks worldwide. At the same time, the global economy is showing signs of a slowdown. Given current valuation levels, we expect performance in the equity market to be more sideways going forward. We see the greatest potential for returns in companies with stable valuations and companies that were negatively affected by the pandemic in recent years and where there is an unmet need among customers. In addition, we believe that the Swedish economy will show a stronger growth than the rest of the world during the upcoming year.
