Portfolio manager comments — Q2 2024

Fund performance was positive in Q2 and the fund rose almost 2% in SEK. The market continued its upward trend after the strong start to the year with prices driven by report results in April and May that were sufficiently strong to increase the risk appetite further. The Riksbank's rate cut in May increased the interest in the smallest equities in the equity market, despite moderate revisions to earnings for the full year and a stabilization of the US long-term rate. The index fell slightly in June when investors gradually became concerned about a potential economic slowdown in the US, together with political uncertainty in France.

Truecaller, Ericsson, AstraZeneca and the consultancy companies Sweco and Afry were among the strongest contributors to returns in the period, while the consumer companies RVRC, Thule and Rusta as well as the heating pump company Nibe had a negative impact.

The fund increased holdings primarily in Essity and Nibe in the period and also made a new investment in Nokia. The holdings in the cyclical companies Boliden and StoraEnso were sold due to strong share price performance and uncertainty about economic outlooks, while the position in SCA was significantly reduced.

As with the outset of Q1, we believe that further upturns in share prices must be driven by earnings rather than higher valuation multipliers. This can occur through an upward adjustment to earnings forecasts and/or that investors begin focusing on profits for 2025, which are expected to grow by approximately 10% relative to this year's profits. We also see signs that the upturn in the stock market is widening, with additional companies that manage to capture the attention of investors, which should benefit fund performance.
